

CONSULTATION: PRACTITIONER FEES

Issue Date: 16th November 2021

Submissions Due: 10th December 2021

Proposal

The Medical Radiation Technologists Board (the Board) is proposing to increase practitioner fees effective for the 2022/2023 practising year. A 5% increase has been applied to all fees – this is in sync with the current rate of inflation.

While fees were kept the same over the last two practising years (in recognition of the financial impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic), the proposed fee increases are necessary for the Board to meet the ongoing costs of delivering their regulatory functions and responsibilities.

This would see the annual practising certificate (APC) fee increase from the current $460.00 to $483.00 (inclusive of GST) which is a $23.00 increase over a 3-year period.

What will the increased fees be used for?

The proposed fee increases are necessary for the Board to meet the full operational and capital expenditure costs to deliver the functions and responsibilities required of them under the Health Practitioners Competence Assurance Act 2003 (HPCA Act).

There have been gradual increases in costs across all Board activities since the last fees review. Our biggest costs are for our operations and our strategic-focused projects such as strengthening our regulatory work within the context of the Treaty of Waitangi, a scopes of practice review, and the frameworks for the ongoing recertification mechanisms.

The cumulative effect of the fee increases will not cover all forecasted costs and the Board expects to have an annual operational deficit of circa $236k for the 2022/2023 financial year. However, the Board is committed to keeping fee increases at an affordable level for practitioners, and the expected annual deficit is manageable due to the Board having a reasonable level of reserve funds.

What does the Board do to minimise costs?

The Board continually reviews its operations within best-value-for-money principles and in alignment with best practice guidelines promulgated by the Office of the Auditor General and Treasury. A core strategy that has enabled us to keep fees at significantly lower levels when compared to other similar sized regulatory authorities is our partnership arrangement with the Medical Sciences Council, whereby we share secretariat services. This allows us to realise benefits such as more efficient staffing resources and the sharing of office accommodation and a common IT infrastructure. Many of our professional development activities for Board members are also managed as joint events with our colleagues from the Council which means we not only achieve cost savings but also a flow-on effect to achieving consistency in the regulatory standards across the three different professions we (the Board and the Council) are responsible for regulating. As we have become more experienced in working in a world impacted by the Covid pandemic, we have streamlined many of our operational processes with a positive flow-on to our financials.

Why does the Board have reserve funds?

Having a reasonable level of reserves is essential for the Board's financial viability. Under the HPCA Act the Board must fund its operations through a cost recovery model as we receive no government funding. Through prudent financial management over successive years the Board has managed to accumulate a reasonable level of reserves to ensure our regulatory functions are financially sustainable and future proofed.

Are there any developmental initiatives the Board needs to fund?

The Board has a number of important development initiatives planned for 2022/2023. These include meeting our obligations to contributing to the national drive for demonstrable and sustainable improvements to health equity and culturally safe health services. We have a number of significant review programmes in the pipeline, including a revision of the competence standards and a revised supervision framework. Improving our engagement with stakeholders is also a key developmental initiative for the upcoming year.
